Phonathon Phrenzy!

By Donald Smith

Get ready to let your fingers do the walking, because the 1994 Phonathon is rapidly approaching!

The annual Alumni Student Phonathon will begin this Sunday, Sept. 18 and conclude on Oct. 20. This allows us 23 nights of calling to reach approximately 38,000 alumni. Many students and departments are already tuning up their voices for increased articulation, stretching out their fingers for quicker dialing, and rehearsing their scripts to maximize effectiveness. This year's Phonathon promises to be fun, as well as productive. Our pledge goal for the Phonathon is $250,000, but this goal can only be met with full participation from the academic departments and the volunteers involved.

Many students and departments are already tuning up their voices for increased articulation, stretching out their fingers for quicker dialing, and rehearsing their scripts to maximize effectiveness.

Anybody out there know who this enthusiastic young Phonathon worker in this 1988 photo is? And the young woman who earned the balloons? Rumaging through our files for a photo to illustrate this story, we thought it might be fun to run some past Phonathon photos and find out where these Western alums are now. Anybody know?

Each year, 700 volunteers are coordinated to occupy the 32 phones in Room 340 of Downing University Center. These volunteers represent students from fraternities and sororities, students organizations, and the academic departments. These volunteers give of their time and energy to aid in the development of Western Kentucky University. Of course, the candy bar given for every pledge and the free meal donated by area restaurants helps to increase volunteer participation.

The Phonathon is vital to the success of our development program and our growth as a University. As our state-appropriated budget continually decreases, we have one alternative, and that is to rely on private resources. The Phonathon is one of the first indicators of a person's willingness and potential to give to WKU. The Phonathon also serves, in many cases, as the only contact an alumni might have with this University. Our callers are encouraged to talk with the alumni, relive some experiences with them, and get some feedback of their current perceptions. Then, ultimately our caller will ask for a pledge of support for an academic department or program at the University.

Our Phonathon efforts have been extremely worthwhile in the past having generated more than $1.2 million over the past 13 years. Last year, we had a record pledge total at $227,000. The recipients of these gifts are certainly appreciative of the monies they have received, but we believe we can increase the pledge total even further by initiating some new programs.

This year we will experiment with a paid student caller program. Two departments, the Agriculture and Consumer and Family Sciences, have consented to be test groups as we move through this process. A great number of colleges and universities already have paid student caller programs in place and note a 15%-55% increase in dollars raised.

From Art to Advertising, Theatre to Theology, the Potter College of Arts, Humanities and Social Sciences is one of the most diverse of the four colleges comprising Western.

In addition to offering majors in more than 20 disciplines, the college offers a large part of the University's general education requirements and provides graduate instruction in selected areas.

Potter College gives its students a first-rate educational experience. The latest technology is incorporated into the classrooms, studios and labs, from a state-of-the-art language laboratory that supports the work of the Department of Modern Languages and Intercultural Studies to a computer-based electronic darkroom that is replacing the chemical-based darkroom in the nationally recognized photojournalism program.

While up-to-date technology is important, keeping a link with the "real world" is essential. Students need to be prepared for what awaits them after graduation and Potter College alumni often fulfill that need.

For example, the Department of Communication and Broadcasting hosts "Careers in Communication" for its students. Graduates of the program spend a day on campus sharing their experiences with current students. In the Department of Theatre and Dance, 1982 graduate Steven Stines, a designer for Broadway productions, returned to campus to work with students preparing costumes for "Gotta Dance!" the annual dance recital program.

The College strives to give its students a varied curriculum, one that stresses the diversity of life. This is reflected by new general education guidelines that require a semester of a foreign language and a course in World Cultures and American Cultural Diversity.

The Potter College curriculum includes the African American Studies Program, which has grown dramatically under the leadership of Sandra Ardrey, and the Women's Studies Program, now headed by Jimmie Price, with an annual conference that draws nationally prominent speakers and scholars.

Equipment and programming aside, Potter College consists of people—students and faculty—who continue to bring recognition to the University through their achievements.

Two Potter College students, Kelly Brillhart and Paula Trafton, were named Scholars of the College for 1994 for their academic standing. Their perfect 4.0 grade-point averages also earned them Ogden Trustee Awards.

Trafton, a graduate student in English, from Bowling Green, Ky., has just been named WKU's 1994 Robert Penn Warren Fellow.

Students in the Journalism Department continue to win regional, state and national awards, including first place in the national Hearst Foundation photojournalism competition for the fifth straight year.

Members of the William E. Biven Forensics Society took the state speech and debate championship and competed in the national tournament held at Western this spring.

Faculty members John Long of philosophy, James Baker of history and Catherine Ward of English were honored by the College for teaching, research/creativity and public service respectively. Ward received the University's public service award for her contributions to the Women's Studies and Support Programs.

Running quality programs takes money and the College is increasingly looking to outside funding to replace the declining percentage of state support. Programs such as Journalism and Broadcasting need expensive equipment to prepare students to compete in the workplace. The College also wants to play an even larger role in the cultural life of the campus by securing funds for more lectures and performances.

Some programs are already having some success. A recent gift from Cora Dee Hooks will be used to establish a fund to help the forensics program; the Women's Studies and Support Programs has received nearly $50,000 in private donations in recent years, and the History Department uses funds from the Alumni Annual Fund Phonathon to give research grants to faculty members.

"Potter College is hard at work building the future," said Dean David Lee. "And we think that the best way to build the future is with some ideas we've learned from the past, ideas about what really works in higher education."

Dr. Lee said a quality education begins with a quality faculty, which is abundant in Potter College.

"A solid education in the liberal arts is the best preparation for a changing world," he said. "Today's students face a fascinating challenge—preparing themselves in the 1990s for careers which will last into the 2040s. The way to do that is by mastering the skills of analysis and communication which are central to the liberal arts."

"Both tradition and technology are thriving in Potter College," he added.

"The task of the university is the creation of the future," according to philosopher Alfred North Whitehead. That is precisely what the students and faculty of Potter College are doing.

For ideas on how you can influence the quality of education at Western Kentucky University, contact Dean David Lee at (502) 745-2344 or R.M. (Bob) Rutledge, Vice President for Institutional Advancement, at (502) 745-6208.

Finance and Administration

Dr. Charles M. Anderson, Assistant Vice President for

Finance and Administration, has been reappointed by Gov. Brereton Jones to the governing board of Kentucky Educational Television, the Kentucky authority for educational television. Originally appointed in 1986, Anderson's current and third appointment will expire in 1997. Anderson serves on the board's executive and finance committees.

Gov. Jones also has appointed Anderson to the reorganized Kentucky Information Resources Management Commission which is the state's policy-making board for computing and telecommunications. Anderson was one of three nominees submitted by the Council on Higher Education, and will represent higher education on the commission. He was originally appointed to the commission's predecessor, the Kentucky Information Resources Commission, in 1992.

Science, Technology and Health

CHEMISTRY

Dr. Thomas Green has been awarded a $32,000 grant from the National Science Foundation through Kentucky's EPSCoR Program. The project will determine the structure of sulfur compounds in petroleum and asphalt through a nuclear magnetic resonance technique. The petroleum industry will be able to apply the Dr. Green-quantified technique to reduce volatile and non-volatile sulfur compounds in petroleum and petroleum residues to protect the environment. The project is thus rich in both theoretical and practical applications.

GEOGRAPHY AND GEOLOGY

Dr. Christopher Groves and J. Scott Slunder presented

Stormscale changes in limestone dissolution rates: Fort's Funnel Cave, Kentucky at the national meeting of the American Geophysical Union in Baltimore, Md. in May. In July he presented Limestone dissolution kinetics: timescales and affects of the behavior of karst aquifers at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory in Oak Ridge, Tenn. and A continuing effort at Mammoth Cave National Park: Understanding the fundamentals of limestone dissolution in natural karst waters at the Third Mammoth Cave Science Conference.

Dr. David Keeling presented Las Ciudades en la Ordenacion del Territorio at Mar Del Plata, Argentina in May.

Dr. Elizabeth McClellan presented Textural Zoning in Garnet from the Einunnfjellet-Savalen Area, South Central Norwegian Caledorides, at the Southeastern Section of the Geological Society of America in Blacksburg, Va., last April.

NURSING

The Kentucky Council on Higher Education has awarded Dr. Mary Hazzard, head of the Department of Nursing, more than $85,000 for the second year to educate nursing majors through the associate degree program in Glasgow. The program enabled 30 students to graduate last May, and all located jobs in the region. During the second year, 20 students were selected from nearly 200 applicants for the program. Successful applicants completed the non-nursing courses and will prepare for the licensing exam following their two years of study. Grant funds are applied to faculty, distance learning, clerical support, testing and supplies. Classes are transmitted from Western to off-campus sites in Glasgow, Owensboro and Fort Knox. The grant includes fund to introduce video teach-back capabilities into the program this year. Plans are underway to offer additional health sciences courses via television with funding in the future.

Phonathon 1994

The paid student caller system is more effective and efficient for several reasons. First, the callers go through a more extensive training process before actually calling alumni on the phone; volunteers typically can only make a training session 20 minutes before they actually are scheduled to call.

Second, the paid student callers are there for more than just on night; they are able to build experience and feel more confident as the Phonathon progresses. Finally, the paid student callers must show up and show up on time. It's their job, and they must perform. Incentives can also be built in to produce more results. We anticipate moving to a full paid student caller program next year, but we will look at this year's Phonathon to guide us as we move through this process.

Also initiated this year will be a direct mail piece immediately following Phonathon. We will do everything possible to call all of our alumni, even calling during the day. Inevitably, though, there will be some we won't reach. We will send a direct mail piece to every individual whom we did not reach and ask for support for their academic department of another program at the University. Hopefully, this will increase our pledged support and your respective revenue accounts.

If you have any suggestions or comments about the Phonathon, please feel free to call me at 4395. I can always use extra volunteers, too. If you want to stop by to cheer on a department, call, or just enjoy a candy bar binge, please do so. We'll be in Room 340 of DUC from Sept. 18 through Oct. 20. Join us for the excitement!

Smith is Coordinator of the Annual Fund in the Office of Alumni Affairs.

Computer Update

Fifteen interactive television classes are scheduled for delivery to the extended campus centers this fall, according to Dr. Charles M. Anderson, Assistant Vice President for Finance and Administration.

For the first time, two classes are scheduled for delivery at the same time to different locations. A second originating classroom is nearing completion and will accommodate simultaneous transmissions and further expansion.

What Is A Workout?

A workout is 25 percent perspiration and 75 percent determination, or in other words, is one part physical exertion and three parts commitment.

A workout makes you better today than you were yesterday. It strengthens the body, relaxes the mind, and toughens the spirit.

A workout is a personal triumph over laziness and procrastination.

A workout is the mark of a goal-oriented person who has taken charge of his or her destiny.

A workout is a form of rebirth. When you finish a good workout, you don't simply feel better...YOU FEEL GOOD ABOUT YOURSELF!

Public Safety News

Some items of interest to pass along from Public Safety include:

The mandatory seat belt law is in effect as of July 1994.

15th Street (the street in front of Cherry Hall) has been changed from two-way traffic to one-way traffic from State to College Street.

As a safety measure, Entrance Number 2 to Diddle Lot off University Blvd. has been changed to both an entry and an exit.

Reserved parking spaces on campus are enforced 24 hours a day, and illegally parked vehicles are subject to immediate tow, something to remember to avoid embarrassment. These spaces are found in the following lots:

NSF Grants to provide equipment

Two WKU faculty members at Western Kentucky University have won National Science Foundation awards to purchase new laboratory equipment for improving instruction in undergraduate science courses.

Dennis K. George, an engineering technology instructor, received a $36,915 award for the project "Establishing Student Competence in Assessing Chemical and Physical Stressors in the Occupational Environment." The proposal's aim is to provide the Industrial Hygiene curriculum with the instrumentation necessary to teach students the basic skills involved in adequate quantification of chemical/physical stressors in the work environment.

The equipment will enable students to gain expertise in quantification techniques covering a broad range of commonly encountered occupational hazards. Student will gain knowledge in the scientific principles of instrument operation, procedures of instrument calibration and manipulation and the actual use of the equipment in field situations.

Lester L. Pesterfield, an assistant professor of chemistry, received an $18,712 award for inorganic laboratory equipment. The equipment, including a multi-element broadband frequency synthesizer/controller, dual oscillator, magnetic susceptibility balance and two vacuum manifold rack systems, form the basis for a new synthesis/physical methods inorganic laboratory/lecture course.

The course experiments focus on the synthesis and manipulation of inorganic compounds, and their characterization by physical methods. The equipment will also be used in physical chemistry, advanced organic chemistry and advanced physics courses.

The awards are from the NSF's Division of Undergraduate Education's Instrumentation and Laboratory Improvement Program. Only 25 percent of the proposals submitted to the program in the 1993 fiscal year were funded. The broad purpose of the ILI program is to contribute to the nation's goal of fostering excellence in science, mathematics, engineering and technological education, a key component of U.S. competitiveness.

WKYU-TV staff win national awards

Staff of WKYU-TV have won two awards in international competition.

The production team of J Miller, Tom Foster and Jerry Barnaby earned a third-place award from the U.S. International Film and Video Festival for Creative Excellence for their work on the computer animated opening for the broadcast of WKU men's basketball games.

The opening started each of the more than 25 games WKYU-TV produced in 1993-94. Music for the piece was composed by Matthew Gray, a junior broadcasting major from Owensboro, who works at WKU's Educational Television Services.

Miller is a producer/director, Foster is the telecommunications art director and Barnaby is the senior producer/director.

Barnaby also won a Worldfest Bronze Award from the 27th Annual Worldfest Houston International Film and Video Festival for his production of "Puppet Power," which features puppeteer Sherry Burns, who uses the making of puppets to teach children how to learn.

The project was produced as part of WKYU-TV's MainStreet program, which airs each Thursday at 10 p.m. and again on Sundays at 1:30 p.m.
